City of New York Vendors Contracting with ICE

October 15, 2026

At a moment of distress for residents of New York City, in light of recent violent federal law enforcement actions, this report identifies companies that hold contracts with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) and, at the same time, hold contracts with the City of New York. It answers two questions: who those companies are, and how much public money is involved. Fifty-seven (57) vendors meet both conditions. Together they hold approximately $4.1 billion in combined contract awards and authorized funds from New York City public bodies.

Scope. This analysis covers only contracts with the City of New York itself. A vendor is included if federal records show it holds one or more active contracts, task orders, or purchase agreements with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, and local records show it holds one or more active contracts or authorized funding with the City of New York. The analysis focuses on contracts of at least $50,000.

Where the money is. The total is concentrated. Nine (9) vendors account for approximately $1.6 billion, or 39 percent of the $4.1 billion identified. A single citywide Motorola Solutions ($746 million) contract–for radio products and services–alone accounts for 18 percent of the $4.1 billion. Excluding that single contract, the eight largest vendors hold approximately $874 million in contracts. Thirty-one (31) of the 57 vendors hold City of New York contracts worth less than $5 million each.

Sources and figures. Contract values are drawn from an analysis of ICE prime award records from January 1, 2025 through October 6, 2026 and from the published contract records of the City of New York for the same period; individual claims are footnoted throughout. Reported values are total contract award amounts or authorized funding ceilings, not amounts paid to date. For multi-year or maximum-value contract vehicles, the figure reflects the ceiling rather than actual spending, so a vendor's City of New York total may exceed what it has been paid.

Limitations. Subcontractors are not captured in either dataset, so a company or contract for work under a prime contractor may not appear here. The totals in this report should therefore be read as a floor. Inclusion in this report reflects the documented existence of contracts on both sides; it is not an allegation of wrongdoing by any company named.

Key Vendors of New York City Contracting with ICE

A preliminary analysis of federal and local contract data identified 57 vendors holding substantial active contracts with ICE that also hold contracts with the City of New York, valued at over $4.1 billion combined.[1] Our analysis found that among these 57 vendors holding ICE contracts, nine key vendors (City of New York contracts valued at $1.6 billion) stand out in particular because of the ways in which they have engaged in authoritarian enabling behavior and/or raise other major ethics or compliance concerns.[2] These vendors have had an active contract with ICE during Trump's second term, and are materially bankrolling authoritarian politicians or officials; profiting from policies eroding civil or democratic rights; providing resources or services supporting Trump's authoritarian government; and/or actively lobbying against democratic oversight, sanctions, or human rights accountability in ways that benefit the Trump administration and other authoritarian regimes.

Motorola Solutions, Inc.: Motorola is a public safety communications provider, which supplies radios, emergency communication systems, and software used by police, fire, and emergency services.[4] President Trump's holdings in Motorola Solutions are documented among his top large-scale tech investments. During the first quarter of 2026, the President's accounts executed large-volume security purchases in Motorola valued between $1 million and $5 million.[5] Motorola is a key provider of tactical communications, radios, and emergency infrastructure for federal law enforcement and the Department of Homeland Security.[6] The company often receives sole-source contracts, including during Trump's second term.[7] The ACLU has recently raised civil liberties concerns regarding Motorola, noting that its firms aggregate billions of commercial and law enforcement license plate data scans into its Digital Recognition Network (DRN) while maintaining contracts with ICE.[8] Motorola's DRN unit makes its data available to its law enforcement customers for an extra charge, telling agencies they can have "access to billions of detections beyond your own", according to the ACLU's report. Motorola's contracts with New York City total more than $745 million.

[3] Note: The inclusion of Fedcap on this list is primarily due to the organization's own labor violations and compliance problems, which raise responsibility concerns that city officials may wish to review.

SLSCO: In addition to nearly $20 million in contracts with ICE for medical-related services for detainees, Texas-based SLSCO Ltd. has two contracts with DHS worth a total of $1 billion to build the border wall in Laredo and Del Rio, Texas.[9] These contracts were reportedly personally approved by former DHS Secretary Kristi Noem. SLSCO has faced scrutiny over allegations raised in a lawsuit by two former security contractors, who accused the company of allowing unauthorized workers to cross the U.S.-Mexico border to provide armed security at a border-wall construction site.[10] The company was also awarded a $19.7 million contract with the state of Florida related to building and maintenance of the "Alligator Alcatraz" detention facility in the Florida Everglades.[11] SLSCO contracts with the City of New York are worth approximately $277 million.

AT&T: AT&T holds multiple contracts with ICE, with potential total value of over $180 million, including for data analyst support services, data analytics services supporting HSI's Countering Transnational Organized Crime Division, and telecommunications/data infrastructure transition services under an Enterprise Infrastructure Services (EIS) contract. Throughout the second Trump term, AT&T has closely aligned with the administration's policies. AT&T CEO John Stankey heavily praised Trump's "One Big Beautiful Bill Act", noting that the law's pro-investment tax provisions could unlock up to $8 billion for the company.[12] Stankey publicly lauded Trump's FCC Chairman, Brendan Carr, praising the administration's hands-off regulatory approach.[13] Following Trump's executive orders targeting diversity programs, AT&T notably backed away from its DEI commitments.[14] The City of New York has approximately $246 million in contracts with AT&T and its subsidiaries.

Axon: Axon is a public safety technology company best known for TASER devices, body-worn cameras, and digital evidence management software used by law enforcement.[15] Since Trump's second term began, Axon has already won ICE contracts with a total potential value of $61million.[16] In February 2026, Trump purchased up to $5 million in Axon stock, just weeks before ICE moved to solicit a $220 million Taser contract that experts described as "effectively written for Axon's product line" (this contract has yet to be awarded).[17] Our analysis found over $170 million in contracts between the City of New York and Axon.

Carahsoft: Carahsoft is an American technology solutions provider that sells hardware, software, and consulting services to United States federal, state, and local governments, as well as educational institutions.[18] Despite federal investigations into the company centered on allegations of price-fixing, bid-rigging, and potential False Claims Act violations involving overcharges on government software and technology contracts, the Trump administration has continued to award major federal contracts to Carahsoft, such as a massive $970 million Defense Information Systems Agency (DISA) Blanket Purchase Agreement with Carahsoft and Broadcom (awarded March 2026).[19] Carahsoft holds nine contracts with ICE covering a portfolio of surveillance, intelligence, and offensive cyber tools, including a $5.7 million deal with Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) for Zignal Labs AI social media monitoring software, which the Surveillance Technology Oversight Project (STOP) described as an assault on democracy and free speech.[20] Carahsoft has about $20 million in contracts with New York City, according to our analysis.

West Publishing Corp. (Thomson Reuters): Thomson Reuters sells ICE access to its CLEAR database, a powerful commercial data aggregation and identity investigation platform used by law enforcement to locate individuals, trace assets, and conduct background investigations. ICE has integrated CLEAR into Palantir tools used to target neighborhoods for raids.[21] In July 2026 DHS and ICE renewed the contract with Thomson Reuters for continued and expanded access to CLEAR, and in September 2026, ICE awarded Thomson Reuters Special Services a five-year contract worth up to $125 million, expanding the agency's access to commercial data and investigative services.[22] The contract, valued at approximately $25 million annually, will support ICE's surveillance and investigative operations, including monitoring up to one million individuals and identifying suspected criminal or fraudulent activity. The award followed ICE's decision in August to abandon its initial sole-source procurement plan and reopen the contract to competition.[23] Earlier this year, over 200 Thomson Reuters employees wrote a letter to leadership expressing their unease with the company's ICE and DHS contracts. The company then fired Billie Little who they suspected organized the employee letter. Little has Deloitte Consulting, LLP: Deloitte (including Deloitte Consulting LLP) is one of the world's largest professional services and consulting firms. As one of the largest corporate contractors for immigration enforcement agencies, the firm has repeatedly drawn criticism from human rights groups, public activists, and its own employees (dating back to the first Trump administration).[25] Deloitte has reportedly received new work totaling more than $100m from ICE and CPB since January 2025, including contractual updates that increase provisions for "law enforcement systems and analysis for enforcement and removal operations".[26]

General Dynamics Information Technology: General Dynamics heavily profits from both the surveillance and tactical training components of the mass deportation apparatus. Its subsidiaries supply data programming, border surveillance analytics, and the specific ammunition used to train incoming ICE recruits. Civil Rights & Ethics Concerns: Human rights monitors flag GDIT as a major corporate entity monetizing the border militarization boom. General Dynamics, whose subsidiaries supply ammunition used to train ICE recruits, spent more than $3 million lobbying lawmakers to influence the Department of Homeland Security's 2026 budget and other federal appropriations, according to federal lobbying disclosures. The lobbying occurred as the Trump administration expanded immigration enforcement spending, creating lucrative contracting opportunities for companies supplying equipment and services to federal immigration agencies.[27]

Fedcap Rehabilitation Services, Inc.: Fedcap Rehabilitation Services is a 501(c)(3) that provides vocational training, educational services, and employment resources for individuals with disabilities and other barriers to economic well-being.[28] Though its contract with ICE is small (valued at $335,000), Fedcap has many other contracts with the federal government. Its contracts with the New York City total are valued at $113 million and cover a broad social services footprint, including workforce, printing/mailing, and social-services-adjacent support to DOHMH, Housing Preservation and Development, and Consumer and Worker Protection.[29] . A 2018 investigation by the U.S. Department of Labor found that Fedcap had failed to pay required retirement benefits for over one year, then subsequently failed to pay the correct amount for workers at a New York City location.[30] The agency expanded its investigation to 18 other federal offices and facilities served by Fedcap, and it also found that the company illegally deducted third-party administrative fees from its workers' wages. The company agreed to pay $2.8 million to more than four hundred workers to resolve the violations. Then, in 2021, a worker for Fedcap's job placement program filed a class-action lawsuit on behalf of herself and co-workers, alleging that the company committed wage theft against them.[31]

Note: The inclusion of Fedcap on this list is primarily due to the organization's own labor violations and compliance problems, which raise responsibility concerns that city officials may wish to review.

Appendix: Summary of Vendors, Payments, and Awards

The table below summarizes all vendors holding contracts of substantial value with ICE active between January 1, 2025 and October 6, 2026, that also held contracts with the City of New York during the same window. These companies hold ICE contracts with combined potential value of more than $1.3 billion, and have received over $545 million in net payments from ICE since the beginning of 2025. New York City's current commitments to these vendors total more than $4.1 billion. The city has cumulatively paid over $2.9 billion to these vendors for contracts that were active on or after January 1, 2025.[32]

ICE Awards Potential Value includes potential value of active umbrella agreements under which, in some cases, task orders had yet to be executed under the agreement at the time this analysis was conducted. For example, SLSCO's umbrella agreement with ICE (Contract Number: 70CDCR25D00000050) has a total ceiling value of $19.7 million, but no task orders have been executed under the agreement yet, so the only value reflected in the Net Obligations column is the nominal $250 base fee (the minimum guarantee to make a contract legally binding).

 ICE Awards Potential Value does not include recently approved five year $125M contract.*

Not With Our Money is a national economic resistance campaign launched in mid-2026 that calls on jurisdictions nationwide to use the power of procurement, purchasing, and pensions to resist the corruption and complicity that allow companies to profit at the expense of our democracy. The campaign intends to challenge the calculations that corporations make to ensure that they do not continue to benefit from the communities that they harm. Contact us at info@notwithourmoney.org.
